Keeping one's carnal desires (nafs) in check

The carnal self can never be satiated in this world. Once a person gives in to it, it slowly draws him further into sin.

A harām glance at a female is a doorway towards adultery. If this continues unchecked, carnal desires lead one further into immorality. This, in turn, may lead to same-sex attraction.

Like a drug addict always looking for a new 'high', a person will not be content with a mere glance. Watching a pornographic scene could well be the gateway to this vile deed.
